Europe's stock markets gained ground in July (Stoxx Europe Small 200 +0.49% versus Stoxx 600 +0.97%) against a backdrop of US tariffs of 15% on European imports, below the previously expected 30%.

Value and cyclical sectors (banks, leisure, insurance) outperformed by a wide margin over the month.

Mandarine Unique underperformed in July as it was penalised by poor interim earnings releases from Imerys (leading supplier of specialty minerals, France) whose business outlook disappointed, Amplifon (distribution of hearing aids, Italy) whose visibility and reporting quality have deteriorated, and ASM International (semiconductor equipment supplier, Netherlands) whose short-term visibility remains uncertain. At the other end of the spectrum, the fund benefited from solid performances from leading players in the energy transition such as Pfisterer (German supplier of products for insulating and connecting electric conductors) and Prysmian (electric cables, Italy), and from a rebound in certain companies whose businesses depend heavily on tariffs (Remy Cointreau, OPmobility).

In July we invested in Befesa, a world leading recycler of steel dust, and in Metso, a Finnish company that processes minerals and aggregates and whose business outlook appears to be improving. Meanwhile, we took some of our profits in Pfisterer and Prysmian following their strong stock runs, and we sold our line in Dalata (hotels, Ireland) whose management supports Pandox's takeover bid at €6.45.
